Re:Marks

As we journey through the sacred season of Lent, we are called to introspection and spiritual renewal. Lent is a season of preparation, a time for us to reflect on the suffering of Jesus Christ, and to discern how we might more closely align our lives with Him.

This year, I'm inviting us to consider closely the "seven deadly sins." These are not simply a list of moral infractions, but rather they represent attitudes and behaviors that can separate us from God and from one another. These sins represent, as I like to put it, "the contorted condition of our humanity." To remind you, the Seven Deadly Sins are:

Pride
Envy
Anger
Sloth
Greed
Gluttony
Lust

From a broad view, each of these sins potentially disrupts our lives, our families, and our community. By recognizing these sins, we can better understand our own lives. This includes identifying the common traps that frequently overwhelm us. For example, the trap of comparison (e.g. comparing our car to our neighbor's car, or comparing our summer vacation to a friend's vacation) leads to envy.

One sin leads to another vice. In this way, each one is indeed deadly. Our own lives become diminished, and our relationships suffer demise. Pride, for example, can lead us to believe that we are better than others, while envy can cause us to resent the good fortune of others. Anger can lead to violence and division, while sloth can prevent us from fulfilling our responsibilities. Greed can cause us to hoard resources at the expense of others, while gluttony can lead to overindulging. And lust can cause us to objectify others and even to prioritize our own desires over their well-being.

During this Lenten season, the Sunday sermons will focus on these first five. In this way, we look inward to examine ourselves & repent. Then as we approach Holy Week, when we witness Jesus' entry into Jerusalem, when we look again upon Christ on the cross, we can potentially encounter the world's sin.

I encourage you to reflect on these "seven deadly sins" and to consider how they may be present in your own life. And as we do...

May we honestly assess the presence and impact of these sins on us.
May we be open to God's grace at work within us,
so that these sins do not devastate us.

May this Lenten season be a time of deep spiritual growth and renewal for all of us.

Lenten blessings,

Mark Conforti

Book Study

Join Pastor Mark Wednesdays in March to discuss Brian Zehr's book Driving Through Fog: Leading Yourself And Others When You Can't See Where You're Going.

Book Description...

HAVE YOU EVER FOUND YOURSELF DRIVING IN THE THICKEST OF FOG?

You grip the steering wheel and more often than not slow down just a bit. It is natural to become hesitant, and easy to get lost. Visibility is taken for granted until it is limited or worse, gone. It can make the fastest mover among us freeze in our tracks.

Life is filled with seasons of fog, often coming unexpectedly. Leaders are used to looking into the future and planning for success but things have changed. Fog can be personal and life shattering like a loss of relationship or job. It can be health related. It can even be spiritual as the answers we found in previous seasons of life ring hollow amid social disruption.

Such is life for many in a post-pandemic, chaotic landscape. What used to bring clarity is now just a haze. Perhaps more than any other time, we cannot see what is up ahead.

How do we move forward in the face of so much uncertainty?

Driving Through Fog shows us how to lead ourselves and others with proven and personal lessons coming to us in the form of principles that allow us to move forward with intentionality and hope.

Church History

You can't be a Christian by yourself. Spiritual beliefs are personal and private. Religion is communal. We need each other. Faithful discipleship involves working and worshiping together. In Matthew 18:20, Jesus says, "For where two or three are gathered in my name, I am there among them (NRSV)." To know Jesus is to know him in community.

Methodism's founder, John Wesley, believed in faith sharing conferences. As early as June 25, 1744, his diary records Methodism's first religious conference. He called together a few of the movement's preachers to explore three questions: What to teach, how to teach, and what to do.

Until his death in 1791, John Wesley was the movement's undisputed leader. He personally appointed lay preachers and supervised all aspects of their ministry. He also sought the wisdom of others through conferences.

By 1784, two issues threatened Methodism's future. Conferences resolved both challenges. First, mortality threatened Wesley's leadership. He was over 80 years old. He reluctantly agreed to a DEED OF DECLARATION that legally established institutional Methodism. The deed created self-perpetuating conferences with the authority to appoint pastors and deal with all legal and religious matters.

The second challenge came from America. The Revolutionary War ended. United States citizens refused to follow Wesley's pro-British leadership. They needed a church in America with ordained clergy who could administer the sacraments of Baptism and Holy Communion. Wesley personally ordained Thomas Coke, Richard Whatcoat, and Tomas Vasey before sending them to America to ordain the lay preachers.

In 1784, Methodist circuit riding preachers covered all thirteen original states. At John Wesley's written request, Freeborn Garrettson summoned them to Baltimore for what became known as the Christmas Conference. At this meeting, the delegates unanimously and enthusiastically voted to create the Methodist Episcopal Church. John Wesley's representatives ordained the lay preachers. The conference elected Francis Asbury and Thomas Coke as their superintendents or bishops. It also established a college called Cokesbury, a book concern to publish the new church's literature, and allowed "worn out preachers" to retire.

Only clergy attended those early conferences. As the church grew, laity insisted on having both voice and vote in church affairs. In 1830, one predecessor denomination of the UMC approved having an equal number of lay and clergy conference delegates. Other branches of Methodism followed their example though that change in one branch took over a hundred years.

The Methodist Episcopal Church expanded rapidly and needed additional conferences. Local churches held quarterly conferences conducted by a presiding elder (later district superintendent). There were District, Annual, and Jurisdictional conferences for specific purposes and geographical areas. Every four years, a General Conference of the entire denomination still meets. It is the only body authorized to speak for the whole denomination. Our next General Conference will convene on April 23rd in Charlotte, NC.

The idea of holy conferencing goes all the way back to Jesus. In conferences, Methodists listen to and learn from each other. We believe Christ joins us when we gather in his name. Simply put, we are better together.

Confirmation Camp

We had a wonderful weekend at Confirmation Camp! We gathered with 7 other United Methodist Churches at Mount Shepherd Retreat Center. We talked about some of the vows taken to be a United Methodist, and about our Identity, Belonging, and Purpose as people of God. We also got outside and participated in team building and free time activities like high ropes and axe throwing.

35 Years of Excellence

Every successful business prides themselves on the dedication of their employees. The Child Development Center of First United Methodist Church is no different. We value our employees for their dedication, work ethic, positive attitude, and their love of children. It takes a special person to work with three, four, and five year olds daily. We are blessed to have one such person who has worked for thirty-five years - 250 days per year for a total of 8,750 days (and counting!). Such a remarkable achievement!

She is always smiling, kind-hearted, wise, full of energy, smart, and has a servant's heart. Patricia Diane Sturdivant is a joy to work with everyday. She brings wisdom, wit, and joy to all. Coworkers, parents, and children love Mrs. Sturdivant.

March 15, 2024 marks thirty-five years that she has worked at the Child Development Center. We would like to extend our gratitude to Mrs. Sturdivant for your many years of service to our young children!

Spring's Renewal

They came just as they always have Right on time.

Yellow daffodils stretching skyward.
They came in spite of a foreign virus.

They pushed themselves upward just as they always have

As if they knew the exact month
Pink and red peonies almost too heavy to bear.

They came in spite of our masks and social distancing.

They worked their way out of the cold earth

A new resurrection.

Purple and bearded and stately iris.

They came in spite of an economic downturn.

They emerged from winter's sleep

Without coaching or pleading

Lenten roses nodding their heads as if in prayer.

They came in spite of a warming earth.

They crept slowly through the soil to reach the light

Returning year after year

Day lilies in a rainbow of colors. shapes. sizes.

They came in spite of political conflict.

They came as I knew they would.

Because they are nature's faithful.

These spring miracles.

They came once more to give us hope.

Preparing for General Conference

Mark your calendar

General Conference info session April 15, 6:00pm

The next General Conference, rescheduled to meet Apr 23-May 3 in Charlotte, NC, will have 862 delegates. Half of these delegates are clergy, and half are laity. Each has been elected by their peers at Annual Conferences. Clergy elect clergy delegates, and laity elect laity delegates who must be professing members of a United Methodist church for at least two years, and active in their church for at least the last four years.

Where are Delegates coming from?

56% of the delegates are from the United States

~44% of the delegates will come from outside the United States.

(32% from Africa, 6% percent from the Philippines and 4.5% from Europe.)
